Get the best out of your BTL mortgage

Many fixed mortgage deals will be approaching the end of their term this October, so it's a good idea to review your buy-to-let mortgage.

With interest rates still at low levels and demand for rental properties increasing around the country, investing in a buy-to-let (BTL) is a popular choice for many.

Buy to let basics

A BTL mortgage is a specific type of product for those who want to buy a property with the intention of renting it. Because of this, there are different terms and rules around a BTL mortgage (compared to a regular mortgage for a property the buyer intends to live in.)

- With a BTL mortgage, the anticipated rental income is taken into account when the lender calculates how much you can borrow.
- A BTL mortgage could suit investors with enough equity to put down a deposit of at least 20% of the value of the property (but some lenders could require up to 40%.)
- Your credit record is closely scrutinised with a BTL mortgage, as with a regular mortgage application.

Interest rates for BTL mortgages are usually higher than a regular mortgage.

Things to remember

If you have a BTL mortgage already and its fixed interest rate term is coming to an end, you may be thinking about switching products or providers to gain a better deal. Here are some other things to look out for:

- Examine all of your options into the type of product to suit your investment going forward. A financial adviser is best placed to help you with this.
- Don't forget to research any fees and charges around changing your product too, as these could be higher than you expect.
- When changing products, you may be asked about your property's rental income history in order to assure any new lenders that you are able to keep up with mortgage payments.
- Show that you have sufficient savings to cover any gaps in rental periods when your property could be unoccupied.
- For your own peace of mind, having a cushion of savings available to cover any essential repairs is important.

If you are looking to remortgage your BTL property or are thinking about transferring your mortgage to a different provider, our advisers can help you find a product that best suits you.

Some buy to let mortgages are/is not regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority.

Business Protection

You need it more than ever

Prior to lockdown, over half (51%) of businesses had some form of debt, owing an average of £176,000 each – and yet just 20% used an insurance policy as security.

To add to this already significant issue, bank lending to struggling businesses via government-backed COVID-19 loan schemes reached nearly £52bn as of mid-August – meaning that UK businesses are more heavily indebted than ever.

Business loan protection

Business loan protection provides funds to repay a business loan, commercial mortgage, or a director's loan if one of the company's owners were to die or be diagnosed with a serious or terminal illness. Essentially, this type of insurance comprises a life cover or critical illness policy taken out on the life of the business owner or key person, with the payout ensuring the business can pay its debts should the worst happen.

Most lenders require some form of security when lending to businesses; often, business owners will use their own personal wealth (e.g. their property) as security. So, in addition to their business suffering if they were to unexpectedly die or become seriously ill, their family could face serious financial hardship or even lose their home.

Director's loans

It is common for businesses to have a director's loan account, through which the director can:

- Lend money to the business to fund initial start-up costs or see it through cash flow pinch points, for example;
- Borrow money from the company that is not classed as salary, dividends or expense repayments.

According to research from Legal & General, the average director's loan totals £169,000 – and yet well over a quarter (28%) of businesses are unaware that director's loans must be repaid upon death. This means the business could collapse if there is no insurance policy in place as security.

Loss of a key person

A staggering 52% of businesses say they would cease trading within a year if they lost a key person. Losing a key member of staff can have a huge impact on the business in terms of lost profits, poor cashflow and, potentially, a change in its creditors' attitudes to outstanding debts. That's where business loan protection comes in – it can help alleviate financial pressure by paying off the company's debts and enabling the business to get back on track.

Should we be concerned about rising inflation?

Most economists expect inflation to pick up over the next few months as lockdown restrictions ease and shops and restaurants reopen. But is this a cause for concern?

As lockdown measures begin to lift, financial markets are making their adjustments in anticipation of a rise in inflation, with bond yields picking up (meaning prices have fallen) and stock markets rotating from defensive sectors into cyclicals.

What is inflation?

Put simply, inflation measures the change in the prices of goods and services. If it rises then it takes more of our cash to buy things. We all experience inflation in our daily lives, from filling up our cars with fuel, buying groceries or using public transport.

In the UK, the official measure of inflation is the Consumer Prices Index. It's published by the Office for National Statistics (ONS), which monitors what people are spending their money on, using a basket of everyday goods and services.

The ONS adjusts the basket from time to time to reflect our changing spending habits. During lockdown, there was a shift with products like hand sanitiser and hand wipes being added, and items like white chocolate and ground coffee dropping off the list.

Inflation is all an illusion... or is it?

It's easy to ignore the impact of inflation on your finances. Most people's spending habits this month compared with the same time a year ago would probably stick to the same patterns – regardless of inflation at the time – because the differences seem small and therefore wouldn't affect the way they spend.

If you're trying to save money though, it's worth remembering that with interest rates currently lower than the rate of inflation, the real value of any cash savings is falling. In other words, the cost of living is increasing at a faster rate than your savings are growing, which means the spending power of your money is actually falling.

How will inflation affect investments?

Many people in the UK are preparing to spend the cash they've saved over the past year when the lockdown ends and shops, restaurants and entertainment venues reopen. Activity is likely to return to pre-pandemic levels and the expectation is that inflation is likely to pick up. Some economists are worried about inflationary pressures. In addition to this is the effect of government stimulus packages on the economy, which would provide another tailwind.

However, experts believe it's likely to be a short-lived phase and should not pose a longer-term challenge to fixed income or equity markets. The Bank of England does foresee inflation rising towards the 2% mark, but believes it will be a temporary phenomenon. Continuing deflationary forces like ageing demographics, technological innovation and global supply chains cast doubt over predictions of a new era of inflation.

Ultimately if you want to beat inflation in terms of finding some good returns on your savings, investing is the best option at the moment – due to cash savings rates being at such low levels.

One of the best ways to ensure your investments are given the strongest opportunity to navigate the effects of inflation on financial markets is through a global, multi-asset portfolio that's actively managed by a professional team of investors. Speak to a financial adviser to find out more.

The value of investments and any income from them can fall as well as rise and you may not get back the original amount invested.
